Papaya is able to make an estimate of the number of concurrent users. It does this by sending a message to another computer (gtk-papaya.org). This message does not contain any information about you or your computer and this message will only be used to record the number of Papaya users.

☒ Yes, I want to be counted as a Papaya user.

Papaya is also able to keep track of what version of the client users are using. If you enable this option, the version number of Papaya that you are using will be sent inside the above message. Nothing else will be sent. This information will be used only to see how quickly users migrate to a new version.

☒ Yes, I want to tell you my version number.
